Who are refugees?

The 1951 Refugee Convention spells out that a refugee is someone who ...

“owing to a well-founded fear of being persecuted for reasons of race, religion, nationality, membership of a particular social group or political opinion, is outside the country of his nationality, and is unable to, or owing to such fear, is unwilling to avail himself of the protection of that country.”

Refugee Transitional Cash Assistance (RTCA)

The federal government fully funds the state of Maryland to administer RTCA. The program provides financial assistance to cover basic expenses while recipients search for gainful employment. The program is comparable to Maryland’s Temporary Cash Assistance for Families (TCA) program in benefits and requirements, but is designed for qualified immigrants who are ineligible for TCA.

Initial Refugee Health Screening Program (IRHS)

Resettlement agencies are responsible for ensuring newly arrived refugees receive an Initial Health Screening (IRHS) upon arrival to the U.S. IRHS appointments determine if new arrivals have medical conditions that need immediate attention. Children also receive immunizations required for school enrollment at the IRHS. After the IRHS, clients are referred to a primary care physician for preventive health and ongoing care.

Employment Assistance:

Self-sufficiency for clients is the goal of the refugee resettlement program. It is achieved when individuals and families reach a level of economic well-being requiring no government support. Self-sufficiency is achieved through a wide range of social and employment services aimed at improving life for economically disadvantaged populations. Using an array of programs and strategies, MORA’s grantees offer employment services tailored to each refugee’s needs. A few examples of employment services funded by MORA include:

- Job Readiness Training
- Resume Writing
- Job Search Assistance
- Vocational Training
- Interview Preparation
- Transportation Assistance
- Interpretation during job interviews
- Post-placement mentoring for vocational success

English for speakers of other languages (ESOL)

Helping refugees develop English language proficiency is critical to MORA’s mission because refugees who speak English realize faster social integration and economic self-sufficiency. Through our ESOL classes, we also prepare participants for the Citizenship Exam. MORA funds free ESOL classes throughout the State.
