PURPOSE:
The purpose of this policy is to provide guidance to child welfare staff related to responsibilities for the identification, reporting, management and training regarding child sex trafficking victims to bring Maryland into compliance with the Federal Preventing Sex Trafficking and Strengthening Families Act. This policy addresses sex trafficking in all child welfare service delivery areas not just as it relates to Child Protective Services.

BACKGROUND:
The Preventing Sex Trafficking and Strengthening Families Act, enacted in 2014, amends the Child Abuse Prevention and Treatment Act (CAPTA), which provides funding for Maryland’s Child Protective Services (CPS) program. To receive federal funds, states must be in compliance with CAPTA, which was amended to mandate: the development and implementation of policies and procedures related to identifying victims of sex trafficking; reporting to law enforcement, training for Child Welfare staff; reporting missing and runaway youth served by Child Welfare; collecting data related to child sex trafficking; and screening runaway children served by child welfare for both victimization and risk of victimization related to sex trafficking. Children known to the child welfare system are the population most vulnerable to involvement in sex trafficking and being targeted by traffickers. Statistics show that 80 to 90% of trafficking victims report child welfare involvement. As a result, it is critical for child welfare staff to know how to identify victims of sex trafficking or those at risk, and to make referrals to appropriate and available services.

ACTION:

Service Delivery to Runaway Children:

The Case Worker:

The tasks set forth in this policy will vary depending on the type of child welfare service the child is receiving from the local department of social services (LDSS).

- Out of Home Placement: If a child runs away from out-of-home placement or during a trial home visit, the LDSS out-of-home worker will complete the tasks set forth in this policy, including completing required documentation, and ensuring that the runaway is reported to law enforcement as required by the policy on Runaway-Missing or Abducted Children;

- Child Protective Services: If the local department has an active Investigative or Alternative Response when the child runs away, the CPS worker will complete the tasks set forth in this policy, including completing all necessary documentation, and ensure that the runaway is reported to law enforcement;

- Family Preservation Services: If the child runs away while receiving Family Preservation services, the Family Preservation worker will complete the tasks set forth in this policy, including completing all necessary documentation, and ensure that the runaway is reported to law enforcement; and
• If there is more than one active child welfare service being provided to the child, the appropriate service staff will conduct a meeting to determine which worker is responsible for the tasks set forth in this policy. Documentation of the meeting, the participants, and the decision should be documented in MD CHESSIE under Contacts.

Runaway Children:

As soon as the child is reported missing, the LDSS caseworker must complete the following tasks:

• Ensure that the missing child has been reported to the local police. Local police must take a police report as both federal and state law prohibit law enforcement from declaring a waiting period before accepting a report of a missing minor; document the complaint number in the MD CHESSIE in the File Cabinet; obtain a copy of the police report and scan it for placement into the MD CHESSIE File Cabinet;

• Obtain as much information as possible about the child to share with all authorities searching for the child. Such information includes the most current photo of the child; a comprehensive description of the child, including what the child was wearing when last seen; any information regarding where the child might be; a list of places frequented by the child; and any relevant information available on social media;

• Report the missing child to the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children (NCMEC) in accordance with federal law. A missing child report may be completed on the NCMEC website: cmfc.missingkids.org, or by calling 1-800-THE LOST. When the child is not in agency custody, the worker should complete this process in consultation with the parent or legal guardian. After the NCMEC report is complete, it should be printed, scanned and uploaded into the MD CHESSIE File Cabinet; and

• Document the child’s living arrangement in MD CHESSIE as “runaway” until the child is located. The worker should do a new Safe-C indicating the child is on runaway status and the safety plan, (if appropriate) should address efforts to locate the child. Upon return, another Safe-C should be completed.

For further information, the Maryland statute addressing missing children can be found under Md. Code Ann., Fam. Law, title 9, subtitle 4.

Returned Children:

When a child has been located or has returned:
- Notification:
  - The LDSS worker must notify the local police and NCMEC when a runaway child has been located.
  - The LDSS worker must change the Living Arrangement in MD CHESSIE from "runaway."

- Screening:
  - As soon as possible after any runaway child is located, the worker must screen the child for trafficking using the designated screening interview tool found in Appendix I. (Until the tool is added to MD CHESSIE, the worker should use the paper form to complete the sex trafficking screening.)
  - Depending on the relationship the worker has with the child and the child’s level of cooperation, the worker may need more than one interview to discuss the runaway incident and to gather information necessary to identify trafficking or the risk of trafficking;
  - The effectiveness of the tool depends on a sensitive approach that includes building trust; ensuring safety; and meeting the potential victims’ legal, social, and health needs;
  - The information the child provides should be documented on the Child Sex Trafficking Screening Interview tool;
  - When completed, the worker should scan the tool and upload it into the MD CHESSIE File Cabinet; and
  - The reporting and screening of a child must be completed every time a child runs away or returns.

Children Identified as Trafficking Victims:

- All Child Welfare workers need to be alert to the signs of trafficking and use the screening tool whenever there is reason to believe a youth may be involved in, or is at risk of, trafficking.
- CPS Report: If a worker has identified a youth as a trafficking victim, whether by disclosure, as a result of the answers on the screening tool or otherwise, he or she must report the information to the appropriate Child Protective Services Screening unit to document the information in MD CHESSIE as CAPTA requires States to report out on all trafficking cases.
- If the worker cannot identify a specific jurisdiction where the trafficking occurred, the worker should make a report to the local department in the jurisdiction where the youth resides. (See the most recent policy on Human Sex Trafficking Victims)
- Even if the worker cannot identify a trafficker or the child appears not to have had a pimp (e.g., a child appearing to have been soliciting without a trafficker), the worker should make a report to the CPS Screening unit. Consistent with federal requirements and Maryland statute, a child who has been involved in a commercial sex act is considered a victim of child sexual abuse/human trafficking.
- Individuals who are age 18-21 and who are receiving child welfare services who have been identified as a trafficking victim should be reported to the appropriate screening unit. The • screening unit should record the information and indicate “sex trafficking” on the referral but screen out the referral as the youth is 18 or over. This is to ensure that data regarding all victims known to child welfare be collected.
• If a worker has reason to believe that trafficking has occurred but does not have enough information to warrant a CPS investigation, the information can be accepted as a Risk of Harm case. The screener should mark the referral as a human sex trafficking of a youth, then override the decision on the SDM screen to create a Non-CPS referral and assign the referral for an assessment.

Children Identified as Being at Risk of Trafficking Through Use of the Screening Tool:

• If a worker identifies a child to be “at risk” of trafficking through the screening tool, the child may benefit from further discussion.
• The worker can contact any of the current providers currently contracted by the Department of Human Services (DHS) to serve sex trafficking victims or victims of sexual assault to request that a staff member conduct an in-person interview with an “at risk” child;
• If a staff member from one of these organizations is not available to conduct an in-person interview, the LDSS worker may be able to discuss the situation with a staff member to gain additional insight and advice;
• The LDSS caseworker should assess children identified as “at risk” for the need for mental health intervention if the child is not currently in treatment. Suspicions of trafficking should be shared with current therapists.
• When referring children for therapy, request information from the therapist about the therapeutic modality the therapist is recommending. When a trauma screening indicates a need for intervention, trauma certified therapists are best qualified to work with trauma victims. Motivational interviewing is recommended for trafficking victims;
• All services delivered to a child should be documented in the Service Log in MD CHESSIE;
• The worker should alert parents/caregivers of the possible risk of trafficking and advise them of what to look for and how to report any suspicions;
• Taking into consideration the child’s developmental level, ability to process information, and willingness to participate, the worker should have a thoughtful and honest discussion with the child and provider or family regarding the dangers of trafficking, the dangers related to grooming by possible traffickers (e.g. posing as “boyfriends”), of the information regarding how traffickers manipulate children to gain their trust, and the importance of the child having a trusting adult with whom the child can talk further about valuing their sexual boundaries and related issues.
Safety Planning:

- The worker should discuss safety planning with the child and the child's parent or caregiver for any child who has a history of running away.
- The purpose of the safety planning is to assure that the child has positive strategies and coping skills to be employed during times of distress as an alternative to flight.
- The triggers for running away should be identified and, whenever possible, addressed with the caregiver, with the youth's safety being paramount.
- The plan should address the triggers that caused the child to run and the actions that can be taken to support the youth in employing alternative strategies and coping skills.
- Documentation of the safety planning document should be scanned into the File Cabinet and conversations that took place to complete the plan should be documented in Contacts.

Training of Child Welfare Staff:

All Child Welfare staff are required to complete a two-part training on sex trafficking.
- This mandatory training will eventually be added to the core training curriculum for all new Child Welfare staff.
- In cooperation with the University of Maryland Child Welfare Academy, DHS will track all attendees and report attendance to local jurisdictions.
- Local jurisdictions will be responsible for ensuring that all staff attends the training.
- Data on staff training will be reported as required by CAPTA.

INTERVIEW DATE(S): ________________

SCREENING TOOL COMPLETED: _____ YES _____ NO

Directions: Staff completing this tool should have a conversation with the child, as soon as the child returns from runaway or when the worker suspects that trafficking may be an issue, and elicit information from the child on each of the questions listed below. While there is a need to address all of the questions, this should not be completed as a questionnaire but used as a guide for having a conversation with the child. Results of the conversation MUST be recorded on this form which needs to address each of the questions listed: (1) Indicate if the child does not respond after prompting; (2) Be aware of the attitude and demeanor of the child during the discussion and record observations at the completion of the discussion(s); and (3) Let the child guide the amount of information he/she feels comfortable providing. The worker needs to create an environment so that the child can feel comfortable during the conversation and know that the worker is interested in trying to get a better understanding of what is going on with the child. This conversation may need to take place over several visits. Once the worker has covered all of the topics, the tool must be completed and scanned into the MD CHESSIE File Cabinet. If trafficking is disclosed, the worker must report the trafficking to the appropriate CPS Screening unit.

The contents of the tool should be shared with the worker’s supervisor. The supervisor should review and discuss with the worker the outcome of the screening and ensure that the tool has been used correctly and that the outcome reflects the current status of the child.
If the child has runaway at any time, all questions under (1) and (2) should be addressed. If the child is not a runaway, but the worker is concerned that trafficking may have occurred or is currently occurring, the worker can skip to the questions under 2.
